A message from the Director....

Recent events in Ferguson, MO and other places around the nation have raised serious questions about how criminal justice is administered in our state and country – not just in terms of what constitutes responsible policing and where those boundaries lie, but also about the justice, or lack thereof, being dispensed within our courts. Inequities and abuses within a number of Missouri’s municipal courts have made national headlines, prompting one Missouri legislator to pen an editorial entitled, “Who’s Watching the Watchers?”

I can think of no better description of what public defenders do than that: We Watch the Watchers.

Everyone would like to believe that those entrusted with law enforcement, prosecution, and judging never make mistakes, never have agendas or biases that interfere with their objectivity, and never abuse the tremendous power they hold to destroy lives. But the founding fathers knew that not to be true. Even the most well-intentioned officers, prosecutors, and judges are not infallible. They are people and people make mistakes. No one is always objective. There will be times when corners are cut, shortcuts are taken, rules are ignored, and abuses occur. That is why there must be Watchers. There are no public defenders provided in Missouri’s municipal courts. Even in our state courts where public defenders do serve, more resources are needed for them to be the effective check and balance that the citizens of Missouri and the cause of justice need them to be.

Public defenders both investigate the case for the defense and re-investigate the case the state claims it has against the accused. Sometimes the defenders uncover evidence that things are not what the state claimed. Sometimes they uncover evidence that there is more to the story than the police or prosecutors knew and the situation is very different than all assumed. And sometimes the defense investigation confirms that the state got it right, that the defendant did cross the line and has been justly brought before the court. Then the job of the public defender is to figure out why and what would best ensure that this person gets back on the right track. Mental illness and developmental disabilities, substance abuse and addiction, homelessness or other dire economic circumstances, lack of education or job skills – any and all of these may be among the mix that brings a particular defendant into the criminal justice system. Public defenders develop and advocate for solutions that address these problems and get people back on their feet.

Martin Luther King, Jr. said, “True peace is not merely the absence of tension; it’s the presence of justice.” Public defenders are equal parts Watchers and Problem-Solvers, Educators and Advocates. When they are able to do their jobs well, the result is a justice system and a justice that Missourians can trust.

Missouri Public Defenders: Who We Are & What We Do...

What is the Missouri Public Defender System?

The Missouri State Public Defender System [MSPD] is a statewide system, providing direct representation to indigent defendants accused or convicted of state crimes in Missouri's trial, appellate, and Supreme courts. It is an independent department of state government, located within, but not supervised by, the judicial branch. Instead, it is governed by a seven-member Public Defender Commission, each of whom is appointed by the governor. Commissioners serve six year terms and no more than four may be of the same political party. The Director of the Missouri State Public Defender System, Cathy R. Kelly and Deputy Director, Joel Elmer, are appointed by the Public Defender Commission.

Who qualifies for a public defender?

The Public Defender Commission sets indigence guidelines, which are used to determine who is eligible for public defender services. Currently, those guidelines match the Federal Poverty Guidelines. Strictly applied, that would mean an individual making only $11,000 a year would not qualify for a public defender. According to recent reports, Missouri ranks 50th out of 50 states in income eligibility standards for public defender services, leaving a wide gap of ineligible defendants who, in reality, still lack the means to retain private counsel in the market. Defendants have the right to appeal MSPD's denial of their application to the court for an independent review of their eligibility. If the court finds they are unable to afford private counsel, the court can overrule the public defender denial.

Who works for MSPD?

MSPD employs 587 employees, 376 of whom are attorneys. All attorneys employed by MSPD are prohibited from practicing law other than on behalf of clients of MSPD. The department is divided into a Trial Division, an Appellate/Post-Conviction Division and a Capital Division, each of which is described in greater detail in a on pages 16, 55, and 60, respectively.

Non-attorney district office staff is made up of investigators, capital mitigation specialists, paralegals, legal assistants and clerks. An operations staff provides centralized information technology support, fiscal, and human resources services for the 44 district offices located around the state, as well as managing MSPD's contracting of conflict cases to private counsel described in greater detail on page 64

Mission Statement

The mission of the Missouri State Public Defender System is to provide high quality, zealous advocacy for indigent people who are accused of crime in the State of Missouri.

The lawyers, administrative staff, and support staff of the Public Defender System will ensure that this advocacy is not comprised.

To provide this uncompromised advocacy, the Missouri State Defender System will supply each client with a high-quality, competent, ardent defense team at every stage of the process in which public defenders are necessary.

Providing effective assistance of counsel in each case demands a well-trained, highly experienced corps of dedicated attorneys and support staff. High turnover makes this difficult, if not impossible, to provide. After MSPD began hitting turnover rates of 20-22% in the mid-2000's, repositioning salary adjustments were enacted to bring salaries to the levels shown above. The fact that just these small changes were enough to make MSPD's attorney turnover drop several significant percentage points is proof that most public defenders do want to remain in public service if at all possible. However, staggering student debt loans ($60,000—$200,000) make it extremely difficult for even those who are passionate about public interest employment to work for MSPD, make their loan payments, and provide for themselves and their families.

The recession that hit in 2008 was actually much more effective in reducing attorney turnover. Private law firms stopped hiring and senior attorneys on the verge of setting up their own private practice put plans on hold, given the state of the economy. The combination has given MSPD a bit of reprieve from the revolving door, but the underlying factors that have perennially caused high attorney turnover have not been resolved -- Missouri's public defenders still struggle with staggering student loan debt and still are paid less than what their counterparts in criminal justice are receiving. Caseloads are still overwhelming and lawyers still enjoy no immunity from either civil liability or disciplinary action for their failures to handle that caseload effectively, no matter how impossible that task might be.

The District Defenders who head each of MSPD's District offices around the state are equally far behind the counterparts, both within the Missouri criminal justice system and in the field of public defense nationally. Missouri's full-time elected prosecuting attorneys are required by state statute to be paid the same as an Associate Circuit Judge, $133,716. By comparison their Public Defender counterparts are paid an average of a mere $79,491. This level of pay inequity between the defense and prosecution sides of the criminal justice system is neither equitable nor sustainable.

Public Defender Appropriations

General Revenue: Missouri State Public Defender (MSPD) funding is almost entirely from state general revenue. It comes in three appropriations:

Personal Service: Used to pay the salaries of all MSPD employees.

Expense & Equipment: Used to pay the overhead costs of operations, such as office supplies and equipment, employee travel expenses, and rent and utilities for the statewide offices.

Litigation & Contracting Expenses: Used to pay the cost of contracting cases out to private counsel and litigation expenses on both MSPD cases and those cases contracted out to private counsel. Litigation expenses include the cost of experts, depositions, transcripts, exhibits, independent testing of evidence, etc.

Legal Defense and Defender Fund: This appropriation is not money given to MSPD but the authorization to spend money collected by MSPD up to the ceiling of the appropriation. The collections associated with fund are the result of Section 600.090 RSMo, which requires public defenders to assess liens against the clients receiving public defender service. Payments made on those liens are deposited into the Legal Defense and Defender Fund and used to fund all public defender training as well as pay for such miscellaneous expenditures as computer lines, WestLaw, bar dues for the system's 376 attorneys, etc. In FY14 MSPD collected $1.344 million through lien repayments.

The personal service component of the LDDF appropriation authorizes MSPD to pay the salaries of two employees, the system's Director of Training and the Training Assistant, out of the lien moneys collected rather than through the general revenue personal service appropriation.

Debt Offset Escrow Fund: This again, is not an appropriation of actual money, but an authorization for MSPD to collect funds through the state's debt offset program. Under this program, taxpayers due a refund of state income tax who owe a debt to the state may have their refund intercepted and used to pay down the debt instead. MSPD participates in this program to collect payments on the liens described above. The money collected through this program is not in addition to the LDDF collections, but a subset thereof.

Grants: Another 'permission' appropriation, rather than actual money appropriation, this authorizes MSPD to collect up to $125,000 in grants from the federal government or other sources. The last time MSPD collected a federal grant was in the mid-1990's to help begin an Alternative Sentencing Program of social workers to develop client-specific sentencing plans as a way to reduce recidivism. That program proved successful and was picked up and funded by the state after the federal grant expired. Unfortunately, the growing caseload crisis and attorney shortage this past decade required MSPD to dismantle the program in order to turn the social worker FTE into more attorney positions.

Actual Funding: In all, in FY14, MSPD received a total of $36.635 million from the combination of general revenue ($35.291M) and actual collections under the LDDF program ($1.344M).

FY14 Public Defender Expenditures

Collections from clients for the indigent defense services provided to them are generally collected through two revenue streams. Approximately 40% of collections comes through state income tax refund intercepts by the Department of Revenue. The remainder is generally collected by courts who collect payments of the Public Defender fees along with court costs at the close of a case. As the chart reflects, collections overall have steadily declined since the onset of the latest recession, which has of course negatively impacted revenues across the board, both within Missouri and across the nation.

Nonetheless, this past fiscal year MSPD aggressively explored options for improving collections. Actions adopted and soon to be implemented include improved district office communication with clients re the debts owed and accepting debit and credit card payments via both the internet and telephone.

Retention of a collection agency to pursue collection remedies against clients with outstanding judgments was also explored, but proved to be much less tenable. $20.5 million of the outstanding debt owed to MSPD is due from former MSPD clients who are currently incarcerated in the Missouri Department of Corrections. No collections agency was even willing to explore the possibility of collections activities against those individuals. Excluding the incarcerated debtors still left approximately 252,000 unincarcerated individuals with outstanding debts to MSPD and MSPD spent several months in meetings and conversation with collections entities exploring collections actions against these individuals. At the end of the process, however, the unanimous conclusion of all ten or so collection entities contacted in this process was that attempting legal collections efforts against this population -- those at or below the federal poverty level at the time of representation and most with criminal convictions hampering still further any future employment opportunities -- would inevitably wind up costing significantly more than it would return. Not one was willing to undertake the project, even on a trial basis. With only two clerks handling all of the accounts payable and receivable for MSPD, pursuing more aggressive collections efforts in-house is simply not an option; nor, according to the private industry experts, is it likely to be profitable for the state in the long run.

On March 1, 2013, MSPD began recording their time according to task and case type. While public defender time-keeping had been instituted once before, in 2006, as part of a twelve-week workload study, this new time-keeping approach is not a one-time study, but a permanent change in MSPD's way of doing business. Employee time-logs are kept in five-minute increments and are completed by MSPD attorneys, investigators and mitigation specialists.

The time-keeping program in use was designed to allow MSPD management to expand or collapse the number of categories and tasks tracked. This flexibility permits the periodic collection of much more detailed data for use in workload studies or tracking a particular issue of concern, while also permitting the collapse of multiple tasks into simpler-to-use broader categories for the ongoing tracking of time.

Initial data from the new time-keeping system reveals the following breakdown of attorney time within the Public Defender System:

Missouri Public Defenders: Trial Division

These are the trial lawyers, the ones Missouri's indigent defendants first turn to upon being arrested and charged with a crime. The lawyers usually enter on their cases at or soon after a defendant's first appearance in associate circuit court following an arrest and will continue representing the defendant through the entire associate and circuit court process – up to and including the plea or trial and, if convicted, the sentencing hearing. The division consists of 33 district trial offices providing representation in 94.5% of the cases that make up the system's caseload.

MSPD's Trial Division attorneys handle every type of state criminal case in which the law includes a possible jail sentence among the penalty options for the court to consider -- from traffic offenses, conservation, and 'Minor in Possession of Alcohol' offenses up to and including non-capital murder cases. (Capital Murder cases are handled by the MSPD Capital Division.) The Trial Division also provides representation in petitions for release from the Department of Mental Health which is discussed further below.

An MSPD Trial Division Attorney's practice will generally include:

- bond hearings for those defendants who are confined pre-trial and seeking release, which can include verifying a place to stay, finding a sponsor the court is likely to trust, verifying an employer will take them back to work, etc.;
- preliminary hearings;
- tracking down and reviewing all of the state's discovery – police reports, lab reports, witness statements, hospital records, etc.;
- interviewing or deposing the key state's witnesses;
- locating and interviewing potential defense witnesses;
- tracking down records and evidence that may help establish the defendant's innocence;
- visiting crime scenes or re-enacting a described crime to see if the real thing matches up with what witnesses described;
- reviewing the results and original notes and data from forensic tests conducted by the state, determining whether an independent analysis by an expert who doesn't work for the state is warranted, and if so, finding that expert and arranging for the testing of the evidence;
- making initial assessments of the defendant's ability to understand the legal proceedings and, when the defendant exhibits developmental or mental disabilities, arranging for an expert to evaluate the defendant to make that determination;
- researching the law applicable to the defendant's case and litigating motions where it appears the defendant has not been properly charged, the law has not been followed, or the state is seeking to put on evidence of questionable admissibility or reliability;
- negotiating plea agreements with the prosecutor, as well as locating and litigating for sentencing options that could effectively address the problems that resulted in the defendant getting into trouble in the first place and thus reduce the likelihood of recidivism; or

- if the case is one that goes to a trial, conducting that trial, before either a judge or jury, as well as being present and advising the client concerning all the court appearances a defendant will be required to make as his case progresses through the criminal justice system;
- and of course meeting with and advising the client, and perhaps the client's family members if the client requests it, throughout each of the above processes.

As the above list indicates, an attorney's appearance in court on behalf of a defendant is a very small portion of the work they must do on a case. When they have too many cases, some of these steps are skipped or fall by the way side. The state's evidence is taken at face value, assumed by all to be accurate and mistakes fall through the cracks, uncaught and uncorrected. The result is that individual defendants and justice as a whole suffer.

Types of Cases Handled by the Trial Division

FELONY OFFENSES: As the pie chart on the following page shows, 52.35% of the Trial Division caseload in FY14 was made up of felony offenses. These are charges which carry penitentiary time, ranging from one to four years of imprisonment for the lowest level felonies up to life in prison without the possibility of probation or parole for the most serious offenses.

MISDEMEANOR OFFENSES: Misdemeanor offenses are those which carry jail time as a possible sentence, but any jail time imposed would be served in the county jail rather than the state's penitentiary. The maximum sentence on the highest level misdemeanor offenses is one year incarceration.

JUVENILE CASES: Missouri's juvenile courts have jurisdiction over anyone under the age of 17 who is accused of committing an offense that would be a crime if that person were an adult. They also have jurisdiction over various 'status offenses' – things that apply only to juveniles and not to adults. Examples of these would be Truancy and Incurability. Some Missouri courts appoint private attorneys for juveniles who cannot hire their own attorneys, but a number of counties, particularly those in the urban areas with more significant juvenile caseloads, continue to rely on the public defender to provide defense representation to these children.

PROBATION VIOLATION CASES: These are cases in which the defendant has already been through the court system on an underlying charge and placed on probation. The new case arises from the allegation that the defendant has in some way violated the conditions of his/her probation. Violations can arise from new criminal behavior, whether or not any criminal charges were filed; so an arrest alone can be grounds for a probation violation. A defendant may also face a violation proceeding for what are known as technical violations, which are violations of conditions put in place at the time of the probation. These can include such things as failing a drug test, failure to report to the probation officer as instructed, failure to complete an ordered treatment or education program, etc.

PETITIONS FOR RELEASE: Another type of civil commitment in which public defender is involved are those following a finding of Not Guilty by Reason of Insanity [NGRI]. A defendant found to be NGRI is automatically committed to the Department of Mental Health for treatment. Petitions for Release are the requests by those so committed to now be released from the Department of Mental Health. Some who have already been released from the mental institution on a conditional release are asking to be unconditionally released, free of the ongoing supervision and conditions of the Department of Mental Health. The issue in both such petitions is whether the defendant's mental illness is sufficiently under control that he or she no longer poses a threat to themselves or to others. These petitions are litigated before a judge, rather than a jury.

FAQ: Why does MSPD count probation violations as separate cases when the courts and prosecutors do not?

It is the practice of Missouri's prosecutors and courts to hold open the original case out of which probation arose, for the duration of the probationary period. As a result, they then treat probation violations as simply another proceeding within the original case.

By contrast, it is the practice of MSPD and the defense bar as whole to close out a case once the defendant is placed on probation. Neither group of defense attorneys, private or public, is willing or able to commit to continuing to represent, counsel, or maintain contact with that client over the course of his / her probation (which on a felony case can last up to five years) as would be ethically required of them as defense counsel if they maintained these as open cases for the duration of the probationary period.

If a probation violation is later filed, private defense attorneys generally expect a separate retainer in order to represent the defendant on that probation violation. This is why MSPD winds up with many probation violation cases in which the defendant had private counsel on the underlying charge. The defendant cannot come up with the additional money to pay the private attorney to handle the new probation violation matter. By the same token, MSPD is seldom in a position to re-assign to the defendant the same attorney who handled the underlying charge in his case. In either situation, therefore, a new attorney-client relationship must be established just as in any other new case.

The evidence of violation is gathered and reported to the court and prosecutor by the probation officer. The review of that evidence, investigation of its accuracy, the review of the law that applies to the circumstances of this revocation proceeding and the investigation into and presentation to the judge of other sentencing alternatives in lieu of revocation is the obligation of defense counsel. If done correctly, this is very comparable to the work that is required in any other criminal case and therefore MSPD counts it as a case in its own right.

COUNTY VS CIRCUIT SYSTEMS

Missouri's 33 trial offices provide defense representation to indigent defendants in all of Missouri's 114 counties plus the City of St. Louis. Some of the urban offices serve only one county, but most of the offices serving rural counties are responsible for several counties. The office with the largest geographic spread is District 43, located in Chillicothe, which serves eleven counties. Most offices, however, cover between three and five counties.

Currently, the geographic areas covered by defender offices do not coincide with Missouri's judicial circuits, even though the district numbers assigned to each office will often be the same as that of one of the judicial circuits the office serves. For example, one public defender office may serve only two of the three counties in a particular judicial circuit, while also providing service in two counties from an adjoining judicial circuit.

This arrangement will be changing as the result of legislation enacted in the Spring of 2013. HB215 requires that the Missouri Public Defender Commission, which is responsible for determining where public defender offices are established and their boundaries of service, begin the move toward making public defender districts congruent with judicial circuits. A plan for implementing that change is due to the legislature by December 31 of 2015 and final implementation of the revised districts is to be completed by December 31, 2018. Under the legislation, one district office may serve more than one judicial circuit, but circuits may not be split between more than one district office.

MSPD tracks both assigned and disposed of cases for each fiscal year, and both of those numbers for FY2014 can be found within this Annual Report. However, those two numbers are generally not tracking the same cases. Many cases take more than a year from assignment to disposition and many more do not fall neatly, start to finish, within a single fiscal year. The above chart reflects the reality that no lawyer begins the fiscal year with an empty file drawer. At the start of FY2014, Missouri's Trial Division public defenders had over 26,000 pending cases already on their desks, to which another 71,070 new cases were assigned over the course of the fiscal year.

Appellate/Post Conviction Relief Division

MSPD's Appellate/PCR Division consists of six offices, with two offices located in St. Louis, two in Columbia, and two in Kansas City. In St. Louis and Kansas City, both offices do both appeals and PCR's and handle conflict cases for one another. Having a second office down the hall avoids having to transfer conflict cases to an attorney on the other side of the state. In Columbia, one office handles exclusively appeals and the other office handles exclusively post-conviction cases.

Appeals: Direct appeals are the first step in seeking to set aside or overturn a conviction after a trial. The process involves asking the Court of Appeals and /or the Missouri Supreme Court, to review and grant relief because of mistakes made by the trial court. The attorneys review the trial transcript, the trial court file, all the legal documents , and evidence introduced in the case and then present to the appellate courts, through written briefs and oral argument, the errors that were made in the lower court and the law supporting relief. MSPD's appellate attorneys handle cases in the Eastern, Western, and Southern Courts of Appeal and in both the Missouri and U.S. Supreme Court.

Post-conviction Cases: Post-Conviction cases (or PCR's) are collateral attacks on a conviction after the appellate process has been exhausted, and can include challenges to the legitimacy of the appellate process in a case as well as of the trial court proceedings. Unlike an appeal, which can only follow a trial, a PCR can also be filed after a guilty plea. These proceedings are conducted in the circuit courts in all 114 counties across the state + the City of St. Louis and include capital as well as non-capital cases.

In a post-conviction case, the focus is on constitutional violations that could not be corrected at the appellate level. E.g, if an attorney fails to object at the right time at a trial, the trial court's mistake is not preserved for appeal and the appellate court will usually not review it. However, through a PCR proceeding , a court can examine the attorney's failure to make the right objection and the likelihood the defendant would have gotten relief on appeal had the attorney done it correctly. If the court in the PCR hearing finds that, but for the attorney's ineffectiveness, the defendant likely would have had a different result, relief may be granted.

Attorneys handling PCR cases must do much of the same work as their appellate counterparts -- reviewing the trial transcript, the trial court file, all the legal documents , and evidence introduced in the case; but instead of then writing briefs and doing oral arguments for the appellate court, they draft motions to set aside the conviction and conduct evidentiary hearings at the circuit court level. To prepare for these, the PCR attorneys must figure out what the trial attorney should have done, but didn't, and then do it themselves. This can include a fair amount of case re-investigation, such as locating and presenting witnesses the trial attorney failed to locate or present, presenting the testimony of an expert the trial attorney failed to obtain, or putting on new evidence of innocence that was never provided by the state prior to trial. If a post-conviction claim is denied at the lower court level, there is a right to an appeal of that denial.

Private Attorney Cases: In addition to the direct appeals and post-conviction matters arising out of cases initially handled at the trial level by public defenders, our Appellate/PCR attorneys get many cases from the private bar. It is frequently the case that the money to pay counsel has run out by the time a trial is complete and the appellate and post-conviction processes therefore fall back to the public defender.

Capital Division

MSPD's Capital Division provides defense representation in Murder First Degree cases in which the state is seeking the death penalty, as well as for juveniles facing the possibility of life without parole in non-capital murder first degree cases. They also handle direct appeals in cases in which a sentence of death has been imposed. If their caseloads permit, they may occasionally also take on a non-capital murder case from an overloaded trial office.

The division consists of three offices, one in St. Louis, one in Columbia, and one in Kansas City. Because of the complexity of death penalty cases, attorneys handling capital cases are limited to no more than six open capital cases at a time. Two attorneys, an investigator, and a mitigation specialist are assigned to each case.

Missouri Public Defenders Commitment Defense Unit

MSPD's Civil Commitment Defense Unit was created 2003 in response to Missouri's adoption of new 'Sexually Violent Predator' civil commitment laws. After a person convicted of certain sexual offenses has completed his prison sentence, the state may seek to have him adjudicated as a 'sexually violent predator' and have him civilly committed to the state's Sex Offender Rehabilitation and Treatment Services institution. The public defenders working in MSPD's Civil Commitment Defense Unit [CDU] provide defense representation to these defendants during both their initial commitment hearing and jury trial and thereafter, at a new jury trial every year for each inmate to determine whether he or she remains a danger to the community.

At the time this program was created, MSPD received two additional attorneys to handle the anticipated increase in workload from these new commitment proceedings. Today, MSPD has had to pull three more lawyers from the overloaded Trial Division to help handle the growing CDU caseload.

Missouri Public Defender Case Contracting

Historically, MSPD has contracted less than 2 percent of its annual caseload to private attorneys. Contracted cases generally fall into one of two categories:

- (1) Conflicts: The majority of the cases contracted out to private attorneys are second and third-level conflict cases. A conflict case is one in which the local defender office ethically cannot provide representation – usually because they already represent a co-defendant or perhaps a witness in the same case. In that circumstance, the local office sends the client they cannot represent to one of the next nearest defender offices for representation. These are called first-level conflict cases. Where there are more than just two individuals needing representation who are involved in a conflict, (i.e. second and third level conflicts), representation of the additional clients is more likely to be provided by private panel attorneys, who are paid to provide representation on a case-by-case basis. This is more practical and efficient than assigning these clients to yet other defender offices which are even further away from the county in which the case is being heard.
- (2) Caseload Relief: Occasionally, MSPD is able to use vacancy savings to contract out excess cases to private counsel to give especially overloaded or short-staffed offices some workload relief. Funds for these kinds of contracts are not sufficient to solve the work overload, but when available, can provide some relief in especially pressurized offices.

Private criminal defense practitioners can apply to be a panel attorney for MSPD, designating both the counties in which they practice and the types of cases for which they are qualified. Once accepted onto the Panel, they are asked to enter into a Panel Attorney Memorandum of Agreement with MSPD, after which they will be placed in the rotation to receive case assignments in their areas of availability. More information for those interested in participating in MSPD's Panel Attorney Program can be found at http://publicdefender.mo.gov/contracts/MSPD_Contracting.html.

Fee Schedule for Contracting

MSPD utilizes a modified flat fee rate for contract cases. This is a base fee corresponding to the type of case with provisions for additional payment if the case should go to trial. The base fee may also be negotiated upward if the case is a particularly complex one or has special circumstances that may require work above and beyond the norm for its case type or if we are unable to locate a qualified attorney who will take the case at the rate on the schedule, as does sometimes happen. The typical contract fee schedule used by MSPD in FY14 is shown below

Litigation expenses (expert witness fees and travel costs, depositions, transcripts, case investigation, etc) are not included in the attorney's fee. Those types of expenditures are approved separately and must each be submitted to MSPD for approval by MSPD's Deputy Director prior to being incurred.

Note: MSPD will pay additional compensation in cases resolved by trial: Jury Trial - $1,500 for the first day and $750 for each additional day Bench Trial - $750 per day prorated

In FY14, MSPD contracted approximately 3.23% of its total caseload to the private bar. In FY14, MSPD spent $1,819,860.45 to contract out 2,427 cases, at an average cost per case of $749.84.

During the 2014 Legislative Session, the legislature truly agreed to and finally passed funding $3,472,238, to permit MSPD to contract out ALL of its conflict cases, including first-level conflicts, to private counsel as part of its FY2015 budget. The Governor line item vetoed these additional funds. During the Legislative Veto Session, this line item veto was overridden by the General Assembly and the funds added to MSPD's core budget. As of October 1, 2014, the Governor is withholding these funds.

MSPD

SENIOR MANAGEMENT TEAM

Joel Elmer
Deputy Director

The Deputy Director is appointed by the Commission. As right hand to the Director and second-in-charge of the Department, the Deputy Director is involved in all policy decisions involving the Department. He oversees MSPD's Division Directors as well as the Case Contracting Unit (see p. 64), and works closely with the Operations Director to facilitate effective interaction between the Legal Services Divisions and Statewide Services. He also assists the Director in the presentation of and advocacy for the budget request at the legislature and serves as the system's liaison to the Missouri Bar and other organizations and entities as the need arises.

The General Counsel oversees litigation in which the Missouri State Public Defender System is or may become a party. He advises the Director and the Public Defender Commission on legal issues pertinent to the operations of the Commission and Department, and works closely with the Human Resources Manager and local District Defenders on issues of employment law. He also assists the Director and Deputy Director in policy making for the system and serves as a resource to the legislature on both MSPD issues and criminal justice policy.

Michael Barrett
General Counsel

MSPD has three legal services divisions: Trial, Appellate/Post-Conviction, and Specialty Practices, which encompasses capital, juvenile, and the civil commitment of defendants under Missouri's sexually violent predator laws. Each of these divisions has a Division Director that oversees and supports the District Defenders within that division and advises the Director and Deputy Director on needs and issues at the District office level. Because the Trial Division encompasses 33 district offices all around the state, the Trial Division Director also has a Deputy to assist with the oversight and support necessary for that span of service.

Operations & Information Technology Support:

Keeping MSPD's 44 district offices operating and as efficient as possible is the Operations Department. This is where bills are paid, supplies are ordered, inventory is maintained, and payroll, benefits, and hiring are all handled. It is the place the front line people call for help when their computers don't work or they have a case involving computer or cell phone forensics that requires a specialist to examine it; where all of MSPD's electronic databases and services, including its case management system, were developed and are maintained. In short, it is the home of MSPD's Human Resources, Information Technology, Accounting, and Purchasing Departments.

Training:

With ongoing turnover always a challenge, quality training programs are essential in bringing new attorneys and staff up to speed quickly and efficiently, as well as assuring our attorneys comply with Missouri's minimum of fifteen hours of continuing legal education for attorneys to retain their license to practice law. To meet these needs, MSPD's Training Director, Melinda Pendergraph, organizes a number of in-house training programs for new attorneys and programs for experienced attorneys. Recent program agendas have included training on Pretrial Practice, Trial Skills, Forensic Evidence, Mental Health Issues, Advanced Advocacy Skills, Juvenile Practice, and Research and Writing. All of MSPD's training is funded through client contributions to the Legal Defense & Defender Fund.

Melinda Pendergraph
Training Director

Kathleen Lear
Comptroller

Comptroller / Facilities:

The Comptroller tracks MSPD's internal operating budget, prepares the annual budget requests and all mandatory reports, and completes fiscal notes for hundreds of proposed bills each legislative session. She also serves as MSPD's facilities coordinator, conducting lease negotiations with 114 county governments concerning district office space, and overseeing all of MSPD's facilities and office moves, and as the system's Internal Auditor, ensuring our operations procedures and processes, at both the state and district levels, comply with best practices.
